

I am very concerned about the concentration of media ownership in small and mid-sized markets. Such concentrated ownership of media reduces the diversity of different opinions presented to the public. The loss of such diversity will in time, cripple the democratic process by generating blind spots within our nation's awareness of the world and world issues. Even more disturbing is that in this information age, overwhelming ownership of media sources might establish news and information fiefdoms. This again can damage democratic process.